Tools4ever announces the availability of User Management Resource Administrator User resource management for Active Directory and NT Available September 2004

New York, NY (September, 2004) – Tools4ever, leading provider of disk quota, user management and network management solution, announces the availability User Management Resource Administrator. This new product release enables network administrators and consultants to perform the most complex user resource management operations such as automated user and home directory creation, or mass assigning Microsoft Exchange mail boxes. The revolutionary new visual scripting interface transforms every advanced user resource management project into easy-to-understand actions, without requiring any knowledge of scripting languages.

"We see that most network administrators quickly resort to scripting when they need to perform complex user resource management tasks. As we feel that current tools available on the market lack in flexibility, we designed User Management Resource Administrator to visualize and break down scripts into a logical sequence of steps," said Jacques Vriens, CEO of Tools4ever. "We believe that our value-added features like pre-configured scripts and a project wizard will make a network administrator think twice before starting to develop a script."

Feature highlights of User Management Resource Administrator 6.0 include:

- No script knowledge required.
- Pre-configured scripts to minimize the learning curve and configuration effort.
- Complex username and strong password generation.
- Network overview to get a real-time overview of your network without switching to other applications.
- Integrated testing and simulation facility to minimize errors by running extensive simulation and test jobs.
- Integrated export and printing.
